Paris Radio Says Two-Ton Missiles And 175,000 Incendiaries Used

By Leo V. Dolan LONDON, July 28—Birmingham, large industrial city in the west midlands area of England, was heavily bombed by the Nazi luftwaffe during the night.

Widespread raids, reportedly extending to northern Ireland where United States troops are based, were conducted by a German force estimated to total 70 planes.

Greater London itself was included in the aerial assault and some slight damage resulted from incendiary bombs dropped in the London area.

Fires and damage resulted from the assault on Birmingham, the air ministry said.

The raid on Birmingham was the most intensive attack made from the air on English territory in many months.

Birmingham, 113 miles northwest of London, is a large and important manufacturing center. The raid was an obvious attempt by the luftwaffe to avenge the severe Royal Air Force bombing of a German port of Hamburg Sunday night.

(The Berlin radio reported that more than 200 German planes participated in the Birmingham attack and said "very heavy" bombs were dropped.)

Casualties in Birmingham, although undisclosed, were described as "fairly numerous." Among these were a number killed.

Eight Foes Downed British defense forces, including anti-aircraft batteries and night fighters, brought down eight of the Nazi raiders.

The marauding Nazi planes caused the 54th air alert to be sounded throughout London. A number of the raiders reportedly flew over the British capital and several high explosives were said to have been dropped in the home counties.

Bursts of gunfire were heard in the London area before the alert was given and the drone of aircraft in skies lit by moonlight was audible. Fire watchers immediately took up posts on roof tops throughout London. A brief lull followed the sounding of the alert. Then again the sound of aircraft was audible and a heavy barrage of anti-aircraft batteries opened fire on the outskirts of the city, lighting the sky with orange bursts.

The anti-aircraft fire was the longest and heaviest heard in the (Continued on Page Three)

SENATORS KEEP UP DISCUSSION OF WAR FUNDS

WASHINGTON, July 28—The Senate finance committee today has opened up new sources of revenue to bring $500,000,000 annually in additional war funds into the federal treasury.

In a closed committee discussion of the House-passed $6,300,000,000 tax bill, the Senate group voted to conduct hearings on the following revenue proposals not contained in the House measure:

1. Remove the tax-paying "advantage" maintained by residents of the nine community property states to provide $87,000,000 in taxes.

2. Survey the treasury proposal to tax the incomes from future bond issues of states and municipalities. This provision, while not providing any immediate revenue would ultimately result in additional returns of approximately $200,000,000 a year.

3. Hold hearings on the treasury plan to remove an "advantage" maintained by oil and mining companies, under which they are allowed to deduct 27 1/2 percent of gross income annually in special "depletion" charges. This proposal, should it be adopted, would bring in $200,000,000 annually.

Yank, Australian Airplanes Seeking To Destroy Gona Region As Nip Base

HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, July 28—Furious battles between allied soldiers and Japanese patrols advancing toward Port Moresby from the east coast of Papua, New Guinea, were reported in progress today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The fighting, according to latest reports received at headquarters, is taking place in the vicinity of Oivi, east of Kokoda, midway along the road over the Owen Stanley range from the east coast to Port Moresby.

The locale of the battling indicates a Japanese inland advance of about 55 miles since some 2,500 sea-borne troops were put ashore from transports under protection of warships and fighter planes at Gona mission near Buna.

American and Australian fliers pressed heavy aerial assaults against the Jap installations in the Gona area to destroy it as a base and prevent reinforcements from coming in.

Munitions Supply Hit Gen. MacArthur's communique said that in the latest attack against Gona dive-bombers blew up an ammunition dump.

Kupang, Jap-occupied base on the Dutch portion of Timor island, was pounded in two strong night attacks. Direct hits were scored on airdromes, barracks and shelters. Fire were started in the target area.

The Japs countered with a new raid against Townsville, resort city on the northeast coast of Australia, and a third and fourth successive raid on Port Darwin.

The Townsville attack was attempted by a Japanese flying boat which was caught in searchlight beams when it tried a night raid. It was forced to jettison its bombs, which dropped harmlessly, and driven off by anti-aircraft fire.

Small Jap forces of three and five planes made two separate night raids on Darwin. No casualties and no damage resulted.

Importance Of Providing Canning Industry Labor Seen By Plant Managers

Twelve men, representing all major industries in Circleville, met Monday afternoon at the request of the Chamber of Commerce to discuss the labor situation as it affects local concerns. The group was particularly concerned with the problem that may face local canneries when they begin operations the latter part of this week.

N. T. Weldon, local employment office head, stated that he has registered several men who will work at the plants on evening shifts after they are through with their other jobs in businesses in the city. The suggestion was pointed out as a good one and the group has urged that all men who are not covered by the wage-hour law register with the employment office for the part-time work.

Various concerns, including mills and other plants, cannot participate in such a program because their employees are limited to an hourly week scale. However, all attending the confab recognized the possible threat that may face the corn pack unless a reserve of labor is found to operate the factories. This labor shortage will not become acute until after plants get under way in Circleville and Ashville.

Attending the meeting were A. V. Osborn, president of the Chamber; N. T. Weldon, employment director; Delos Marcy, relief director; Norbert Cochran of the Container Corporation; J. I. Smith of the Emerald canning plant; C. R. Barnhart, representing the Winor interests; J. W. Eshelman, speaking in behalf of the Eshelman mill; Eldred Cayce, Ralston-Purina official; Captain George Thornborough of the army repair garage; John Maddux, manager of Maizo Mills; and Mack Parrett, Chamber of Commerce secretary.

Theme of the discussions was the possibility of registering part-time employees for canning factory work, and every effort has been planned to obtain a reserve of labor through this means.

Pravda Says Nine Infantry And Two Tank Divisions Moved From France, Holland

MOSCOW, July 28—The Don river battlefield is littered with more German bodies "than there are trees in a forest," the newspaper Pravda reported today as swift-moving Nazi armies intensified their thrust against Stalingrad following Soviet evacuation of flaming Rostov.

All new German attacks in the Don river elbow have been repulsed, the Soviet high command announced, and extremely heavy fighting is now under way in the vicinity of Voronezh, on the northern Don river front, and around Tsimlyansk, 125 miles northeast of Rostov.

The Germans succeeded in reinforcing with their 323rd division Nazi units previously reported trapped on the five-mile strip formed by junction of the Voronezh and Don rivers. These reinforced troops counter-attacked, but Russian forces gained two more footholds on the west bank of the Don South of Voronezh.

Soviet troops broke through the defenses of one important town held by Nazi forces besieging Voronezh from the South.

Severe fighting was said to be in progress close to Voronezh where the Russians are striving to smash the German left flank. South of the city, 10 miles east of the Don on the Moscow-Rostov railway, the Soviets were said to have broken through strong German defenses and established themselves to the rear of the enemy. A German attempt to eject the Russians, it was said, failed.

On the north and northwest side of Voronezh the Germans were reported trying to make their positions impregnable by maintaining a heavy box fire around their own positions. Despite this Soviet offensive pressure was said to be developing at all points.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 28—The Rev. Kurt E. B. Moizahn, 47, pastor of the Zion Lutheran church in Philadelphia and a former German cavalry officer, goes on trial in federal district court today on a charge of conspiracy to violate the espionage act in behalf of Germany and Japan.

Four others who were indicted with him last June 10 by a federal grand jury in Hartford and who have pleaded guilty to similar charges will testify against the pastor who is accused of using his parsonage as a "post-office" for an axis spy ring. FBI men, immigration officials, the mysterious Aleksi Polypenko, who was named as a go-between in the spy plot, and other will testify against the Rev. Mr. Moizahn, according to Thomas J. Dodd, special assistant attorney general.

TRIAL OF SPIES
HIT IN ACTION
BY ATTORNEYS

Legality Of Commission
Set Up By Roosevelt
To Be Decided

HIGH COURT IS CALLED

Momentous Decision May Be Reached If Judges Admit
Germans' Counsel

WASHINGTON, July 28 — The United States supreme court was reassembling in Washington today to meet in extraordinary session at noon tomorrow to hear an eleven-hour appeal from defense attorneys, challenging the constitutionality of the trial of eight Nazi saboteurs before a military commission, named by President Roosevelt.

Three Army colonels, serving as defense counsel, will petition the high tribunal to hear arguments on granting writs of habeas corpus, which would free the German spies from the jurisdiction of the military commission. It is generally conceded the high court will order the hearing on the writs, as a single jurist could dispose of the preliminary petitions and there would be no need for all nine justices to return from their vacations to pass on that question.

Some of the greatest constitutional questions raised since the civil war will be debated before the high court, and passed on by it, if the hearing is granted. Defense counsel will challenge the constitutionality of the presidential order, creating the seven-general military commission, and the constitutionality of the executive proclamation, by which the President denied these eight Nazis—and all other future spies—the right of appeal to civil courts.

To Pass on Powers
If the supreme court takes jurisdiction, the questions before it will be momentous. In effect, the court will have to pass on the issue of the President's wartime powers and on the right of any president to suspend the writ of habeas corpus in time of war. It will make future law, affecting quite possibly many of the President's executive orders and wartime proclamations.

The announcement that the court will meet in special session tomorrow came after the military trial of the Nazis had lasted 16 days and after both prosecution and defense rested their cases. Issued in the name of Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone by the clerk of the court, it read:

"The chief justice directs that it be announced that the supreme court will convene a special term of the court on Wednesday, July 29, at noon, in order that petitions for writs of habeas corpus on behalf of certain persons now being tried by a military commission, appointed by the President, may be submitted to it.

"The petitions will be presented by counsel on July 29 and the prisoners will not be present at the bar of the supreme court on that day."

It will be the first time the court has convened in special session in 22 years and the first it ever has convened in special session to hear a case affecting human rights. All previous cases, heard in special session, affected property rights; the last, on April 13, 1920, concerning a dispute between Oklahoma and Texas over title to an oil field, which was running wild at the time.

In the saboteur case, defense attorneys—Colonels Cassius Royall, Kenneth Dowell and Carl L. Ristine—will ask the high court to hold the military trial unconstitutional. They are expected to do this under the fifth and sixth amendments to the Constitution. The fifth amendment, in effect, holds that a person, facing the death penalty, must be tried in a civil court unless he is a member of the Army, Navy or militia during wartime. The sixth amendment guarantees all accused the right of a public trial before a jury from the jurisdiction in which the crime was committed.

ASHVILLE

Mrs. Blanche Baker is removing this week from her present location near the U. B. church to Columbus, making her home with her son-in-law and daughter, Fred and Mrs. Fuller. She has been in poor health for some time but is a lot better she says. Has been a resident of Ashville for many years.

"Don't hit every time but a lot more than it misses," a moon sign follower told us following the rain pour down for 20 minutes. Said that it had rained on Sunday morning and now Monday and more to come yet. How do I know?, he said. From new moon on through the four-week period, weather of some different kind will occur during the phases, on the exact date, or one, day before or after. Honor bound to mention no name, but being full moon yesterday and along with it, the rain, all of us will be watching out to learn how this new kind of moon, weather sign works.

Arthur Hines of up beyond Brinker Corner territory was in at headquarters telling us all about his fine, 8-acre muskmelon patch and from what he says it won't be long now until they'll be ready for the slicing and eating. Be keeping in mind what he said about the coming out. The Vincent gardeners have several acres of truck growing in fine shape over on the Calvin Scothorn farm. Frank Grice, our local melon grower, had a lot of hard luck at the start of the season by Walnut creek going on a rampage flooding most of his ten acres. But prospects now are much improved and a fairly good crop is promised.

A couple of baskets full of snow white Leghorn eggs, thirty dozen in all, were brought in to the Billy Bowers grocery here yesterday evening from the Dill farm by Mrs. Hays Dill herself. About 125 layers are kept throughout the year and get the best of care and fed according to directions for egg production. At the close of each month Mrs. Dill knows exactly what profit, if any, her hens have made, usually runs, she said, from twenty to 25 dollars net profit not counting anything for labor. Made inquiry about her son David who after graduating from Walnut Hill, took an art course of study at a Cincinnati school and graduated from there. Now has employment at Cleveland and doing fine, she said.

Paul Pettibone is now employed at the Kroger grocery store. Harvey Trone of Lancaster is here filling the clerkship gap while Harry Topolosky is on vacation. Harvey is no novice as clerkships go, having been with Mr. Morris while operating his store at Lancaster for several years. . . . A really wet shower was on again yesterday evening at 10 o'clock—wheat threshing near all completed.—Corn needed these showers.

Possibility Of Junior Fair To Be Discussed

Directors of the Pickaway County Agricultural Society, sponsors of the annual Pumpkin Show, will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m. in council chamber to discuss the possibility of holding a Junior Fair this Fall instead of the annual fair festivities. The special session has been urged by groups interested in holding an exhibition for county farm youths in October.

No definite announcement has been made on the likely outcome of the confab, but it is understood that the plan to be considered includes exhibitions and entertainment for county 4-H Club members which will be held on the city playground lot or in some large building downtown.

Money to finance the affair will probably come from society coffers with the county commissioners supplying $500 each year for the promotion of 4-H Club work and the remainder for premiums and expenses to come from the regular show funds. Robert G. Colville, Pumpkin Show treasurer, was in Columbus Monday afternoon talking with state officials about the Junior show and announces that it will be possible for such an exhibition to receive $800 for promotion of premiums in such an event.

Show directors recently declined to hold a Pumpkin Show this year as a war cooperation measure.

LANCASTER, July 28—Directors of the Ohio Shorthorn Breeders association have chosen the Fairfield county fair, Lancaster, as the scene of their annual show. It will be held October 14-17 in conjunction with the Fairfield event.
Prizes for the shorthorn show will total $1,500.

Putting the HEAT on Hitler!

"If the shippers and consumers of this coal want to help win the war, they will ship and buy and stock all the coal possible in the spring and summer months." JOSEPH B. EASTMAN, Director, Office of Defense Transportation.

"A full coal bin is the best possible insurance anybody can have against a wartime coal shortage." H. A. GRAY, Acting Director, Office of Solid Fuels Coordination for war, HAROLD L. ICKES, Coordinator.

America today is pouring out war materials faster than all the Axis powers combined. The months ahead will see production of guns, tanks, planes and ammunition in a rising flood beyond anything ever imagined.

That's putting on the heat—and it takes heat to do it.

It takes millions of tons of coal to keep America's war factories booming. And America is producing it—to the stepped up tune of 11,000,000 tons a week—24 per cent more than last year. This coal must be moved throughout the vast expanse of the land. It is being moved—swiftly, smoothly and efficiently—by the nation's railroads.

And that's where the Norfolk and Western comes in. From the world famed bituminous fields along its lines, this railroad is moving about 1,000,000 tons of coal a week—nearly one tenth of the weekly output of the United States.

The Norfolk and Western Railway and the other railroads of the nation will keep right on doing their part in "putting on the heat" to the best of their ability.

In normal times, one coal car in every four is needed to move fuel for home-heating. And here's where you come in. Place your order for coal now for delivery as soon as practical. That will mean more cars—more power—more heat to keep our steadily increasing war production program going full speed ahead through the winter.

Place your order now—and help put the heat on Hitler!

The Norfolk and Western Railway and the other railroads of the nation will keep right on doing their part in "putting on the heat" to the best of their ability.

In normal times, one coal car in every four is needed to move fuel for home-heating. And here's where you come in. Place your order for coal now for delivery as soon as practical. That will mean more cars—more power—more heat to keep our steadily increasing war production program going full speed ahead through the winter.

Place your order now — and help put the heat on Hitler!

British capital for months. Inter-mittent gunfire continued on the outskirts for some time.

A wide area of houses was damaged in Birmingham when high explosives dropped in a number of districts and started fires.

175,000 Fire Bombs Hurlled

The German-controlled Paris radio had said last night that the raid on Hamburg Sunday night, during which numerous two-ton bombs and 175,000 incendiaries were rained on the port and submarine base "calls for reprisals by the Luftwaffe."

A dispatch from Stockholm quoted an item from Berlin in the newspaper Svenska Dagbladet stating that 99 persons had been killed in the Hamburg raid, but added that it was feared casualties will be "very heavy." Many persons at that time, it was said, still were trapped in ruins. Destruction in the port, largest in Europe, was admittedly extensive.

British Wellington bombers, it was revealed, yesterday afternoon heavily bombed objectives in northwest Germany.

forces which crossed to the west bank of the river back to the East. Russian forces, strongly entrenched on the west bank, continued to advance, however.

Men Moved from West

The Communist newspaper Pravda said that the Germans recently had rushed nine infantry divisions and two tank divisions to the Russian front from France and Holland.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Reports have been current for a week or more that several divisions were transferred to the Russian front from occupied countries in western Europe. Military experts were quick to point out that if the reports were substantiated the removal of the troops from Europe did not necessarily in any way weaken Nazi defenses there since many areas of the occupied countries were used merely as training grounds.)

Nazi General Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock battered relentlessly at the Russian armies all along the lower reaches of the Don river from Rostov to Timiryansk, 125 miles to the Northwest, and sent another spearhead crashing toward Stalingrad on the Volga.

Loss of both Rostov, large oil refining center in the north Caucasus, and the city of Novocherkassk, 28 miles to the Northwest, was announced at midnight by the Soviet high command.

The Russian armies, after exacting a tremendous toll of the 600,000 Germans sent against Rostov, were ordered to evacuate the city, the high command said.

Heavy battling in the Timiryansk area where the Germans are seeking additional bridgeheads from which to launch a drive into the heart of the Caucasus "continues with varying success," the Red army communique said.

ACTOR, RADIO

Aroff, Lieut. Irving H. Klein, judge advocate, has read into the record letters written by Aroff to Martin's draft board in Los Angeles showing he was subject to induction into the Army at the time.

The first letter from Aroff asked a deferment of Martin for several months pending a decision on his application for a commission. Later, Aroff wrote that the application had been disappointed, but that Martin had been recommended for appointment as a chief boatswain's mate and had accepted.

Although Martin accepted the chief boatswain's rating, he was enlisted as a "chief specialist," a rating so new at the time that the Navy had not yet designed insignia for men in that class. He was at first assigned to duties in the recruiting service, but now is managing the motion picture theatre for service men at the Treasure Island Navy base.

Aroff also is accused of accepting a set of studs and cuff links worth $25 from Lawrence Stromberg; a set of gold cuff links valued at $40 from Ensign Irving Cummings Jr.; of processing the application of Ernest J. Friedman for enlistment in the Navy Reserve knowing it carried a false resident address, and of falsely telling Navy intelligence officers he had purchased the automobile from Martin.

ALLIED PLANES KEEP UP STEADY RAIDS IN EGYPT

CAIRO, July 28—Allied aircraft hammered axis positions without let-up today as the British Eighth Army resumed the offensive in the battle of Egypt.

After a three-day lull in ground action, Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck again was smashing at the enemy line west of El Alamein and was reported making some progress.

The attack, which began Sunday night, was sustained throughout Monday with support of RAF fighters and light bombers which ranged over the battlefield, blasting German-Italian gun positions and the entrenched tanks which Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had mired in the desert sands to meet the British onslaught.

Way for the attack was prepared by a steady series of bombing raids on enemy positions. RAF bombers were over Tobruk Sunday night and early Monday, following up the devastating raid of Saturday night by big four-motored American planes which turned the little port into blazing inferno.

U.S. Troops Wave to Flying Fortress in Britain

CHARTER OF FREEDOM

IN HIS recent address to the nation and the world, Secretary of State Hull made this memorable statement on behalf of the United States government:

"We have always believed—and we believe today—that all peoples, without distinction of race, color or religion, who are prepared and willing to accept the responsibilities of liberty, are entitled to its enjoyment. We have always sought—and we seek today—to encourage and aid all who aspire to freedom to establish their right to it by preparing themselves to assume its obligations.

"We have striven to meet squarely our own responsibility in this respect—in Cuba, in the Philippines, and wherever else it has devolved upon us. It has been our purpose in the past—and it will remain our purpose in the future—to use the full measure of our influence to support attainment of freedom by all peoples who, by their acts, show themselves worthy of it and ready for it.

THE farm bloc in Congress has put through its plan for using more grain and other farm products as raw material for artificial rubber. Whether the President will sign the measure is another question. He, along with many rubber experts, has insisted on a greater use of petroleum, of which there is an unlimited supply.

Everybody recognizes that farm crops have piled up for lack of foreign markets, until there is a natural desire to get rid of the surplus by almost any means. But it should also be obvious that in the present state of the world, it is desirable to carry large surpluses, against the time when there will be an almost limitless demand for foodstuffs to feed a starving world.

WASHINGTON — If you are wondering what has been done about building those 300 wooden barges to relieve the oil transportation problem in the East and New England, the answer is — next to nothing.

Though the President okayed the program some weeks ago, during a conference with Senators Ralph Brewster and Wallace White of Maine, and though Donald Nelson also is strong for it, the Maritime Commission, which has $20,000,000 allocated for the barges, seems in no mood to get going.

Senators Brewster and White informed the President that New England faced an oil famine this Winter because of the war diversion of tankers, which normally deliver 90 percent of the petroleum for this area. The two Senators urgently suggested that at least 300 wooden barges be built at once to substitute for the tankers.

"We can build that many in Maine alone and they can be used to haul oil, in barrels, anywhere along the Eastern seaboard," Brewster pointed out. "We have in Maine a number of small yards which have been idle since the war began—also, plenty of lumber and expert craftsmen who have had years of experience in wooden shipbuilding."

The President was all for the idea. He instructed Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the Maritime Commission, to get 300 wooden barges built as fast as possible. So far, however, contracts for only 35 barges have been let, and Maritime Commission officials admit no more are "in prospect."

One inside reason for the delay is the Maritime Commission's deep-seated antipathy to any type of wooden cargo vessels. The fact that there is no steel for the barges doesn't seem to count. Members of Congress who have inquired about the barge-building program have been told that the Commission has no experts in its employ who are "familiar with wood," nor has an effort been made to get any—despite the President's order.

Other excuses have been that wooden barges were a menace to navigation because of the fire hazard; and that oil, leaking from wooden barges, killed fish. However, until a few years ago, wooden, rather than steel, barges were used almost exclusively for hauling oil.

Meanwhile, Thomas R. McDermott of New Orleans, and other Louisiana-Texas barge builders, have been cooling their heels in the Maritime Commission pleading for a chance to build wooden barges, and to build them almost overnight.

Recent Research Work On Infantile Paralysis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

INFANTILE paralysis is one of the few infectious diseases with a summer incidence, and this fact has stimulated a great many research workers to attempt to find a cause for it.

One theory which has been advanced is that it is due to swimming or bathing in rivers, lakes or at the outlet of rivers in the ocean where contamination by sewage has occurred. In one report it was shown that out of 419 cases of infantile paralysis observed over a three-year period, 105 of the patients, slightly more than 25 percent, had swum, waded or paddled in more or less contaminated waters just prior to the attack.

Another theory, less well supported by fact, also concerns swimming and suggests that undue cooling of the body may render it susceptible to infection with the virus of the disease.

Due to a Virus
There is no doubt that infantile paralysis is an infection due to a virus and probably enters the body through the nose; only in the case where the olfactory nerve spreads out, are nerves which go directly to the central nervous system exposed.

It is hard to believe that there is only one way for this infection to occur. It may come from droplet infection on food or from human contact. For instance, a case has been reported of four boys in a boys' school, all of whom came down the same day. No other cases developed in the school. Careful analysis was made of their daily habits and lives; they were not in close contact either in dormitories or in classrooms but they were all served at the table by a maid in whose home two cases of infantile paralysis later occurred. This looks like a pretty well proved case of a human carrier.

Under the heading of treatment, undoubtedly the most important advance has been the so-called Kenny treatment, the principle of which is to prevent contracture by early passive movement. At the University of Minnesota, where Nurse Kenny is now working, arrangements have been made to offer a course of this treatment to physicians, hospital nurses and physical therapy technicians.

It should be remembered that infantile paralysis is not a very contagious disease and that even in epidemic areas only a small number of people exposed take the disease.

For treatment in the acute stages, the use of convalescent serum is about the only thing that has any standing. Nobody would claim that it is anywhere like 100 percent perfect, but it does no harm and should, in my opinion, be given a trial whenever possible and available.

An interesting observation that has not been followed up very closely in this country is that of a Swiss doctor, Contat, who in the 1937 epidemic prescribed potassium chlorate for the relief of the sore throat accompanying the disease. He was greatly surprised at the favorable turn taken by the patient, as the temperature soon became normal and signs of meningeal irritation and paralysis disappeared. He followed this up by treating the next 35 cases with potassium chlorate and in the whole series there was no fatality and little permanent paralysis.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
M. L. W.: Please tell me what to do about a small lump the size of a pea on the back of the neck.
Answer: Consult a doctor and find out what it is. It is probably nothing more serious than a wen which can easily be removed.

M. B. D.: Please tell me what effect digitalis has on the heart. Does it strengthen the heart? Over how long a period could three grains of digitalis be taken without ill effect?

Answer: Digitalis is one of the best drugs to improve the output of the heart and the circulation. Three grains a day of the powdered leaf of digitalis cannot be taken very long without causing nausea. Those who are on a maintenance dose of digitalis usually leave off for one or two days at the end of the week. This prevents cumulated dosage and insures a more even action.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

CLAIRE TOOK out a white bathing outfit that consisted of brief shorts and a brief brassiere. "How do you like it?" she asked, holding up the two pieces.

"It's all right," said Dian; "what there is of it."

"It's the very latest thing."

"I can imagine. It's so late, it seems to me, it almost forgot to get here at all."

Dian got out her own suit, which wasn't old-fashioned, but which, compared to Claire's, seemed like yards of material.

"This will have to do for me," she said. "Imagine, it's got a skirt!"

"Oh, well," said Claire comfortingly. "Lots of girls still like those tricky little things."

"Thanks, I'm glad to hear that," Dian said. "I'd hate to feel like my grandmother or something."

They heard Bill and Paul enter the adjoining room, and lowered their voices.

There was a knock on the dividing partition, and Paul spoke.

"We'll be ready in three shakes of a sheep's tail," he said. "Don't be late."

"We're almost ready now," Claire called back. "But don't get wet until after we reach the island," she added. "We don't want to get the boat all sloppy."

"Yes'm," said Paul.

"But I was counting on swimming to the island," said Bill.

"Silly!" said Claire. "You've got to help Paul row the boat."

"So it goes," said Paul. "Men must always labor."

"What do you mean, men must always labor?" Dian said. "I expect to spend half the day over a hot fire broiling wienies for you."

"Wienies?" said Claire. "Why, the chicken's already cooked and ready to eat. Who on earth wants to bother with wienies?"

"We so," said Dian. "Bill, Paul and I."

"We'll eat the chicken for lunch," said Paul. "And have the wienies for supper."

"The idea!" Claire said. "Mother and I slaving to fix a perfectly marvelous picnic hamper—and you bring along wienies."

"Oh, forget it," said Dian, for Claire's ears only. "If the men want wienies, let them have wienies. Why should you get all upset?"

Claire tried to think of something to say and couldn't. She finished getting into her bathing suit, piled her hair high upon her head and fastened it with a ribbon. Dian, watching her, reluctantly admitted that it would be difficult to find a more beautiful specimen of young womanhood. No wonder men could so easily shut their eyes to Claire's selfishness and fickleness! No wonder their eyes opened so wide with admiration when they beheld Claire as she looked!

"Like it on me?" Claire asked, seeing Dian's eyes upon her.

"Yes," said Dian. "You look like something out of a magazine cover."

Claire smiled, pleased. She waited until Dian was in her suit, and then said, "I like yours, too. It's really the type of thing that suits you to perfection."

"Meaning you don't think I should wear long skirts, long sleeves—stockings and laced-up shoes?"

"There you go again!" Claire said. "Being sarcastic. Come on, let's join the boys."

She caught up a bathing cap and went out. Dian followed her.

Bill and Paul were waiting for them. And, Dian thought, you couldn't find two better-looking men if you searched the world over, or two men with flatter tummies, broader shoulders and narrower hips. And tanned? Golden brown. Paul—who was blond; and mahogany-colored Bill—who was brunet.

"Gosh!" said Claire softly. "They are easy on the optics, aren't they?" said Dian.

"They simply take my breath!" Claire exclaimed.

"Then stop looking at them," Dian said. "You'll need your breath for swimming." She moved forward. "Greetings, gentlemen!" she said. "All set for the desert island epic?"

"All set!" said Bill. And he thought, "Sweet girl, Dian—like a slender ballet dancer in that cute skirt." He then looked at Claire and thought, "Venus DeMilo in a bathing suit!" He grinned and said, "It's a shame to take two lovely creatures like you girls to a desert island! We should be marching you along the boardwalk at Atlantic City."

"Cut the kidding, Bill," said Paul. "And help me with the boat. It's stuck."

"Right!" said Bill.

And presently the boat moved off—two pairs of oars dipping and rising.

The two girls sat in the stern. Dian gazed off toward the island, Claire gazed toward the men. Their smoothly working muscles fascinated her.

"How on earth could an artist get to be so strong?" she asked Bill.

He flushed a little. "Oh, I run around the Central Park reservoir three times a week," he said, joking. "Then, too, you can't imagine how many times I pick up tubes of paint and my brushes. That, you know, develops one."

"Idiot!" said Claire, laughing happily.

"And I got my strength," said Paul. "From opening cans in my West Indies kitchen." He looked at Claire and smiled. "But from now on I shall have to take up some other form of exercise, since you're going to use your mother's recipes, and feed me like a lord."

"That's what you think, my darling!" said Claire.

And Dian saw her when she once more turned admiring eyes upon Bill Rollins.

Although Dian had been dreading the day, and praying that it wouldn't be too long a one, she began to enjoy herself the moment she set foot upon the island. She loved the outdoors—sun and sky and water. It did things to her. It seemed to wash from her all feeling of malice and resentment, and emotions of that sort.

She bustled around helping get all their stuff settled.

"Why, I'd forgotten all about this old stone fireplace you boys built!" she said to Paul.

"So had I," said Paul. "Boy, what fun we had doing it. And now what fun it's going to be cooking those wienies in it."

Bill watched them. "Darned if I don't envy you your memories," he said. "It must have been fun being an Ardendale kid."

"It was," Paul said. "But I suppose all small-town kids are about the same."

"It wasn't, alas!" said Bill. "My folks never stayed put very long. I was always being dragged off here or there or the other place. The longest I ever stayed at one address was when I was in college."

"I should think that would have been exciting," Claire said. "I don't think being a small-town child is anything to boast about." She took a tablecloth from the picnic hamper her mother had prepared. "I used to envy people who didn't live in small towns."

"Yes, I remember," Dian said. "You used to go down to the depot every day you could manage it, to see the New York express go through."

"And wish you were sitting at one of the tables in the diner," said Paul.

Claire laughed. "I'll never forget the first time I went to New York," she said. "I nearly drove mother wild begging her to go into the diner and eat. And then I over-eat and got terribly sick."

Under the heading of treatment, undoubtedly the most important advance has been the so-called Kenny treatment, the principle of which is to prevent contracture by early passive movement. At the University of Minnesota, where Nurse Kenny is now working, arrangements have been made to offer a course of this treatment to physicians, hospital nurses and physical therapy technicians.

It should be remembered that infantile paralysis is not a very contagious disease and that even in epidemic areas only a small number of people exposed take the disease.

For treatment in the acute stages, the use of convalescent serum is about the only thing that has any standing. Nobody would claim that it is anywhere like 100 per cent perfect, but it does no harm and should, in my opinion, be given a trial whenever possible and available.

An interesting observation that has not been followed up very closely in this country is that of a Swiss doctor, Contat, who in the 1937 epidemic prescribed potassium chlorate for the relief of the sore throat accompanying the disease. He was greatly surprised at the favorable turn taken by the patient, as the temperature soon became normal and signs of meningitic irritation and paralysis disappeared. He followed this up by treating the next 35 cases with potassium chlorate and in the whole series there was no fatality and little permanent paralysis.

M. L. W.: Please tell me what to do about a small lump the size of a pea on the back of the neck.
Answer: Consult a doctor and find out what it is. It is probably nothing more serious than a wen which can easily be removed.

M. B. D.: Please tell me what effect digitalis has on the heart. Does it strengthen the heart? Over how long a period could three grains of digitalis be taken without ill effect?

Answer: Digitalis is one of the best drugs to improve the output of the heart and the circulation. Three grains a day of the powdered leaf of digitalis cannot be taken very long without causing nausea. Those who are on a maintenance dose of digitalis usually leave off for one or two days at the end of the week. This prevents cumulated dosage and insures a more even action.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

CLAIRE TOOK out a white bathing outfit that consisted of brief shorts and a brief brassiere. "How do you like it?" she asked, holding up the two pieces.

"It's all right," said Dian; "what there is of it."

"It's the very latest thing." "I can imagine. It's so late, it seems to me, it almost forgot to get here at all." Dian got out her own suit, which wasn't old-fashioned by any manner or means, but which, compared to Claire's, seemed like yards of material.

"This will have to do for me," she said. "Imagine, it's got a skirt!"

"Oh, well," said Claire comfortingly. "Lots of girls still like those tricky little things."

"Thanks, I'm glad to hear that," Dian said. "I'd hate to feel like my grandmother or something."

They heard Bill and Paul enter the adjoining room, and lowered their voices.

There was a knock on the dividing partition, and Paul spoke.

"We'll be ready in three shakes of a sheep's tail!" he said. "Don't be all day."

"We're almost ready now," Claire called back. "But don't get wet until after we reach the island," she added. "We don't want to get the boat all sloppy."

"Yes'm," said Paul.

"But I was counting on swimming to the island," said Bill.

"Silly!" said Claire. "You've got to help Paul row the boat."

"So it goes," said Paul. "Men must always labor."

"What do you mean, men must always labor?" Dian said. "I expect to spend half the day over a hot fire broiling wienies for you."

"Wienies?" said Claire. "Why, the chicken's already cooked and ready to eat. Who on earth wants to bother with wienies?"

"We so," said Dian. "Bill, Paul and I."

"We'll eat the chicken for lunch," said Paul. "And have the wienies for supper."

"The idea!" Claire said. "Mother and I slaving to fix a perfectly marvelous picnic hamper—and you bring along wienies!"

"Oh, forget it," said Dian, for Claire's ears only. "If the men want wienies, let them have wienies. Why should you get all upset?"

Claire tried to think of something to say and couldn't. She finished getting into her bathing suit, piled her hair high upon her head and fastened it with a ribbon. Dian, watching her, reluctantly admitted that it would be difficult to find a more beautiful specimen of young womanhood. No wonder men could so easily shut their eyes to Claire's selfishness and fickleness! No wonder their eyes opened so wide with admiration when they beheld Claire as she looked!

"Like it on me?" Claire asked, seeing Dian's eyes upon her.

"Yes," said Dian. "You look like something out of a magazine cover."

Claire smiled, pleased. She waited until Dian was in her suit, and then said, "I like yours, too. It's really the type of thing that suits you to perfection."

"Meaning you don't think I should wear long skirts, long sleeves—stockings and laced-up shoes?"

"There you go again!" Claire said. "Being sarcastic. Come on, let's join the boys."

She caught up a bathing cap and went out. Dian followed her.

Bill and Paul were waiting for them. And, Dian thought, you couldn't find two better-looking men if you searched the world over, or two men with flatter tummies, broader shoulders and narrower hips. And tanned? Golden brown—Paul—who was blond; and mahogany-colored Bill—who was brunet.

"Gosh!" said Claire softly.

"They are easy on the optics, aren't they?" said Dian.

"They simply take my breath!" Claire exclaimed.

"Then stop looking at them," Dian said. "You'll need your breath for swimming." She moved forward. "Greetings, gentlemen!" she said. "All set for the desert island epic?"

"All set!" said Bill. And he thought, "Sweet girl, Dian—like a slender ballet dancer in that cute skirt." He then looked at Claire and thought, "Venus DeMilo in a bathing suit!" He grinned and said, "It's a shame to take two lovely creatures like you girls to a desert island! We should be marching you along the boardwalk at Atlantic City."

"Cut the kidding, Bill," said Paul. "And help me with the boat. It's stuck."

"Right!" said Bill.

And presently the boat moved off—two pairs of oars dipping and rising.

The two girls sat in the stern. Dian gazed off toward the island. Claire gazed toward the men. Their smoothly working muscles fascinated her.

"How on earth could an artist get to be so strong?" she asked Bill.

He flushed a little. "Oh, I run around the Central Park reservoir three times a week," he said, joking.

The figures which distinguish mahogany wood are brought out by the direction in which the wood is cut when made into lumber. "And I got my strength," said Paul, "from opening cans in my West Indies kitchen." He looked at Claire and smiled. "But from now on I shall have to take up some other form of exercise, since you're going to use your mother's recipes, and feed me like a lord."

"That's what you think, my darling!" said Claire.

And Dian saw her when she once more turned admiring eyes upon Bill Rollins.

Although Dian had been dreading the day, and praying that it wouldn't be too long a one, she began to enjoy herself the moment she set foot upon the island. She loved the outdoors—sun and sky and water. It did things to her. It seemed to wash from her all feeling of malice and resentment, and emotions of that sort.

She bustled around helping get all their stuff footed.

"Why, I'd forgotten all about this old stone fireplace you boys built!" she said to Paul.

"So had I," said Paul. "Boy, what fun we had doing it. And now what fun it's going to be cooking those wienies in it."

Bill watched them. "Darned if I don't envy you your memories," he said. "It must have been fun being an Ardendale kid."

"It was," Paul said. "But I suppose all small-town kids are about the same."

"It wasn't, alas!" said Bill. "My folks never stayed put very long. I was always being dragged off here or there or the other place. The longest I ever stayed at one address was when I was in college."

"I should think that would have been exciting," Claire said. "I don't think being a small-town child is anything to boast about." She took a tablecloth from the picnic hamper her mother had prepared. "I used to envy people who didn't live in small towns."

"Yes, I remember," Dian said. "You used to go down to the depot every day you could manage it, to see the New York express go through."

"And wish you were sitting at one of the tables in the diner," said Paul.

Claire laughed. "I'll never forget the first time I went to New York," she said. "I nearly drove mother wild begging her to go into the diner and eat. And then I over-ate and got terribly sick."

Always a high style color, it has seldom been available in readymade clothes unless a customer puts up a howl and a long search for it. But both New York and Hollywood designers have lots of it in their advance fall fashion lines, and you may be sure that accessory designers will get their wares in step with it by the time the demand is current.

SELKIRK TO GET HENRICH'S POST IF ARMY CALLS

NEW YORK, July 28—Out in front in the American league pennant race by 12 1/2 games, the New York Yankees probably will fall back on the veteran George Selkirk for right field duty in the event Tommy Henrich is called to the colors.

The Yankee slugger's draft board at Massillon, O., announced yesterday that he would retain his A-1 rating and probably would be called next month.

This news came close on announcement that "Tuck Stainback" had been sent to the Yanks' Newkirk farm on 24-hour recall, and if Selkirk fails to fit in with a batting average down close to a hundred for the 20 games he has played, Stainback may be brought back to tryout for any outfield vacancy.

SELKIRK TO GET HENRICH'S POST IF ARMY CALLS

NEW YORK, July 28—Out in front in the American league pennant race by 12 1/2 games, the New York Yankees probably will fall back on the veteran George Selkirk for right field duty in the event Tommy Henrich is called to the colors.

The Yankee slugger's draft board at Massillon, O., announced yesterday that he would retain his A-1 rating and probably would be called next month.

This news came close on announcement that "Tuck Stainback" had been sent to the Yanks' Newkirk farm on 24-hour recall, and if Selkirk fails to fit in with a batting average down close to a hundred for the 20 games he has played, Stainback may be brought back to tryout for any outfield vacancy.

BROOKLYN AND ST. LOUIS MEET IN VITAL TILTS

Dodger Lead Of Seven May Be Boosted Or Slashed In Three Frays

By International News Service
By tonight today, the Brooklyn Dodgers can be leading the National league by as many as nine games or as few as five.

The pace-setters in hot pursuit of their second straight pennant tangle up with the St. Louis Cardinals in a double header brought about by yesterday's postponement of the series opener, and a doubt win for either club could have a vital bearing on the rest of the campaign which seems to have settled down to a battle between those two.

The Dodgers started out today seven games in front of the Cards, with the double bill to be followed by a single game tomorrow, after which they will meet in only two more series this season—one more in the East and another in the St. Louis park.

That the Cards have a pretty good chance of knocking the Dodgers over despite the fast pace set by the leaders in winning, against only 28 defeats is indicated by the records of games between the two teams. The Cards have won seven from the Dodgers while losing only six, and have been getting tougher and tougher as the season rolls along and their young pitchers find themselves.

Series Important

That Dodger lead is almost insurmountable, all things considered, but it may be much smaller at the finish—especially if the Cards can make some headway in this series.

All other clubs in the National league idled with the Dodgers and Cards yesterday, leaving the day's only action to be found in one American league game, win by the Boston Red Sox at Cleveland, 8 to 5.

The win put the Red Sox back in undisputed possession of second place in the American league standings, a game ahead of the Indians, and 12 1/2 behind the idle Yankees.

Tex Hughson hurled the victory and Al Milnar, Indian starter, was charged with the defeat.

LUTHERAN TEAM KEEPS ITS PACE IN CHURCH LOOP

Presbyterians obtained their first runs in the sixth when two crossed the platter.

Jim Wells was the winning pitcher, Berger being on the mound for the losers.

Lineups followed: Lutherans, J. Wells p. L. Siegwald 3b, Dreibach ss, Walters ss, Valentine c. C. Martin 1b, George 2b, Brobst cf. D. Wells rf. P. Siegwald c. Presbyterians, Smallwood c. Woods 1b, Berger p, Moorehead 3b, Hansen ss, Colville 2b, Welker lf, McCoard rf, Orr ss, Blake ss.

The Lutheran team will play Lithopolis Tuesday evening on the local field.

Frank Fischer Named Chairman Of County-Wide War Chest Drive

EDUCATOR WILL HAVE BIG ROLE IN VITAL WORK

R. G. Colville, Mack Parrett To Serve As Treasurer And Secretary

WILL SELECT TRUSTEES

Next Meeting, August 6, To Be Important To Program In Community

Pickaway county's War Chest was another step closer to realization following a meeting Monday evening in which Frank Fischer, superintendent of city schools, was named chairman of the campaign. In addition, the group of some 40 members of the chest organization also elected Robert Colville to serve as treasurer and Mack Parrett to act as secretary.

Judge Meeker Terwilliger, who served as chairman of a similar organization in 1918, was appointed as honorary chairman of the group but will serve only in an advisory capacity. All members of the confab decided to wait until a meeting, called by Mr. Fischer for Thursday evening, August 6, to elect trustees.

Business of the meeting included discussions of possible quotas for the solicitations, but no definite action was taken on setting the figure.

Clark Will, chairman of the organization committee, had charge of the initial plans for organization of the group and announced the candidates which were elected on recommendation of the organizing committee.

Following Mr. Fischer's unanimous selection as the group head the original organizing committee was dissolved with a vote of thanks from the new group. The new officers will be responsible for active work of the War Chest with the board of trustees to be selected at the next meeting.

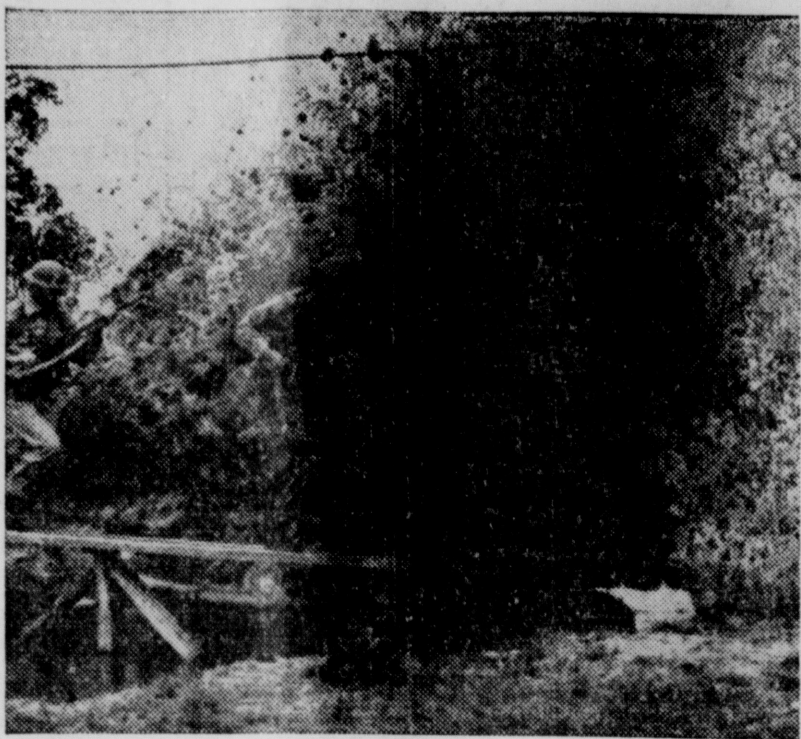

The organizing committee submitted the following suggestions for the board: Turney Glick, Tom Renick, Harold Bowers, James Yost, Dudley Roth, Harry Heffner, John Boggs, Tom Gilliland, William Defenbaugh, H. W. Campbell, George Foreman and Clark Will. The trustees will approve disbursement of the funds collected in the drive to support all charity work in the county.

Red Cross officials have stated their intention to hold a separate drive and not participate in the movement but all other groups are expected to receive benefits from the coffers of the new War chest.

BUDGETS TALKED

County commissioners Monday discussed budgets of the sheriff's office, the prosecuting attorney, clerk of courts, probate court and others, but no definite action was taken on their approval. The remainder of the day was spent in routine payment of bills and hearings on varied complaints.

Aussies Learn Guerilla Warfare

Every Australian soldier is given an obstacle training course. Shown are Aussie soldiers crossing a stream of water on a small plank while explosives go off beneath them and shoot water and mud into their faces. The modern soldier must be thoroughly trained in guerilla tactics in order to survive the ordeals of modern warfare.

Homes Joining Fully In Defense Effort Will Be Marked With 'V' Insignia

Homes participating fully in the Circleville defense effort will be designated soon. Beginning sometime in September the Circleville Civilian Defense Council will distribute window stickers declaring: "This is a V Home."

Homes to receive the stickers will be those recommended by air raid wardens and fire watchers in the various blocks in which the homes are located.

On the stickers will be the following:

"We in this home are fighting. We know this war will be easy to lose and hard to win. We mean to win it. Therefore we solemnly pledge all our energies and all our resources to the fight for freedom and against Fascism. We serve notice to all that we are personally carrying the fight to the enemy, in these ways:

"1. This home follows the instructions of its air raid warden, in order to protect itself against attack by air.

"2. This home conserves food, clothing, transportation, and health, in order to hasten an unceasing flow of war materials to our men at the front.

"3. This home salvages essential materials, in order that they may be converted to immediate war uses.

"4. This home refuses to spread rumors designed to divide our nation.

"5. This home buys War Savings Stamps and Bonds regularly. "We are doing these things because we know we must to win this war."

A bulletin received this week from the Office of Civilian Defense in Washington revises instructions for combatting magnesium bombs. New instructions differ in three important points from those formerly issued by the government. They call for use of a jet or solid stream of water on bombs rather than a spray, minimize the value of sand for fighting bombs, and emphasize the need for speed rather than waiting for the thermit reaction to be completed or for a "burst" charge to go off.

Further information on handling of incendiary bombs will be carried to all homes in the city in districts which have provided air raid wardens or fire watchers for the Defense Council. Chief Air Raid Warden Bishop Given has experienced much difficulty enrolling air raid wardens and watchers in certain parts of the city.

Any patriotic citizen who wishes to have a role in the Defense Council work is urged to contact Mr. Given.

Forrest Short, Circleville township, was designated as chief of the messenger corps following resignation of C. W. Clark, Watt street, because of health.

That Russian army fighting Hitler seems to stand a surprising lot of "annihilations."

and youngsters bringing in the most scrap.

The newspaper also designed a "Scrap Scout" badge, awarded to any boy or girl who brings in 25 pounds of scrap iron or rubber. The campaign has aroused tremendous enthusiasm and it looks as if the World-Herald would be instrumental in cleaning up all the scrap iron in Nebraska.

OPTICAL TRUST BUSTER

A friend asked Mrs. Thurman Arnold if her husband, the trust-busting assistant attorney general, always wore that black ribbon around his neck.

"Yes," said Mrs. Arnold, "he does — to keep track of his eye-glasses. Sometimes he may be even stark naked, but he will always have that black ribbon around his neck."

"It comes from losing so many pairs of glasses. For a time it was more than the family budget could bear. Eighteen-fifty every time he lost a pair! You know how expensive eye-glasses are."

Here Mrs. Arnold reflected a moment. Then she added, "Eighteen-fifty a pair—you know. I think that was one reason Thurman was so hard on the optical industry."

CARUSO'S WIDOW

When the S. S. Drottningholm arrived at New York on her latest trip, great confusion and disappointment arose from the fact that passengers were detained aboard for as long as six days, while rigid examinations were carried out by Immigration, FBI, and State Department officials.

In the midst of this confusion, one passenger remained serene — Dorothy Caruso, widow of the great Metropolitan Opera tenor Enrico Caruso.

Returning from France and Italy, where she had been doing social work, American-born Dorothy Park Benjamin Caruso was eager to get ashore in the New York she used to know. But Jesse Saugstad, State Department's shipping expert, came to her and said:

"Mrs. Caruso, you have been a soothing influence among these people through the whole voyage, and although I could get you off today, I would like you to stay aboard and quiet some of these ruffled tempers."

Mrs. Caruso was glad to oblige. With her two daughters, Gloria and Jacqueline, she remained on the Drottningholm, tied up to the pier, for six days, mingling with grouchy and discontented passengers.

On the last day, daughter Gloria, who had not seen America since she was a child, was asked what she wanted to do most when she got ashore.

"I don't want to stay in New York," she said. "After all the confusion of the trip and the heart-rending things I have seen in Europe, I just want to get out into the woods somewhere, and sit under a tree for a whole week!"

CAPITAL CHAFF

Probably the traffic cop who ticketed the limousine parked in front of the Commerce Department, corner of E and 15th streets, didn't know it belonged to Nelson Rockefeller. The chauffeur had left the car just long enough to walk the terrier. . . . Despite the war, the much vaunted Civil Service system moves like molasses. A young man who joined the Navy in March, after working for six months in the Office of Price Administration, has just been advised by the Civil Service Commission that he is eligible to accept the job he resigned from three months ago.

HARRY CARTER JR., WINS POST IN HURON COUNTY

Harry Carter Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carter of near Williamsport, has resigned as a teacher and coach at Kingman high school, Clinton county, to become coach at Monroeville high school, Huron county. Mr. Carter is the husband of the former Helen Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hill of Williamsport.

JAYCEES MEET TONIGHT

A business meeting of Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce is scheduled Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in Betz restaurant. A lunch will be served after the meeting.

FDR Praises FBI Boss

President Roosevelt praised J. Edgar Hoover for his fine work in both peace-time and wartime as director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. A personal greeting from the President marked Hoover's twenty-fifth anniversary with the Justice Department.

MORE SPACE FOR GRAIN FOUND IN MADISON AREA

Pickaway county's AAA committee announced Tuesday that farmers who do not have storage space for their 1942 crop of wheat may obtain space in Madison county. The office announces that space to hold some 50,000 bushels has been found in the adjoining county and those who need the housing facilities should contact the office at once.

DUFURE GOES TO JAIL

Harold Dufure, arrested early Monday by city police, was committed to county jail Monday afternoon in default of a fine of $10 and costs placed against him by Mayor Ben Gordon for operating a motor vehicle with only a temporary permit and no chauffeur's license.

DANIEL CARREL DIES AT 83; SERVICE WEDNESDAY

Daniel Carrel, 83, died Monday afternoon at his home on the Lancaster pike. He was born August 14, 1858, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lebanon Carrel.

Survivors include his widow, Anna Peterson Carrel; the following children, Mrs. Grace Gilmore of Circleville, Mrs. Alma Junior of Laureville, and Mrs. Mary Shumaker and Heber Carrel of Lancaster; a brother, Joseph of Portsmouth, and a sister, Mrs. Martha Watts of Lancaster.

Funeral will be Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the M. S. Rinehart funeral home, the Rev. A. Wagner of Hallsville officiating. Burial will be in Tarlton cemetery.

KIWANIANS GATHER WITH BOYS WHO WENT TO CAMP

Circleville Kiwanians enjoyed an interesting meeting Monday evening in Hanley's tearoom when boys who attended Camp St. Joseph, near Lockbourne, as their guests last week met with them for supper. The meeting was informal with Harry Briner, chosen as captain by the other boys, reviewing the week's activities.

The Lockbourne trip replaced the club's annual Summer health camp, suspended for the duration.

Kiwanians and their leaders are invited to attend a meeting next Monday evening with Nebraska Grange at Walnut township school. The program will be presented by the local club.

VALENTINE WILL FILED

Will of Priscilla Valentine, late of Ashville, filed in probate court Monday, lists the following beneficiaries; two grandchildren, James and Oscar, to receive $600 each from the estate; a son, William, $1,200; Mary Valentine and Hattie Baum, all the household furniture and supplies; and Mary Valentine, William Valentine Hattie Baum and Oscar and James Valentine, one-fourth each of the remainder of the estate. The estate has been estimated to value $11,000.
